The Cramers of Plain, Franklin Township, Wisconsin Ken Kraemer

Cramer vs. Kraemer

Everybody has heard of the Kraemers spelled with a “K” but who has ever heard of the “other Cramers” whose name is spelled with a “C”? It turns out that the Cramers were as important to the early history and growth of Plain beginning in the 1850s as the other Kraemers were to the growth of Plain beginning in the 1920s. This essay is about these early Cramers.<sup>1</sup>

First pioneers in Franklin Township

The Cramers were among the very first pioneers to Franklin Township, arriving in the late 1840s and early 1850s. The 1859 plat map of Franklin Township on the previous page shows them in the company of the other first families who were mainly English, Swiss, and German Protestants. They were also second-generation immigrants who had moved west from Ohio or further east: Dewitt Slaughter, T.J. Morgans, Thomas Wells, Robert A. Davidson, B. V. Bummell, John Smith, Andrew Cooper, William Henneman, Jeremiah Whiteis, Yost Folker (Volkel), John and Michael Weishan, George Neuheisel and Urs Schonemann (Thering, 1982; Mrytle, 1985). See names in yellow on the map on the previous page.

“Go West Young Man”

The Cramers had emigrated around 1824 from Letterkenny Township, Franklin County, Pennsylvania to Troy Township, Morrow County, Ohio where they spent a 20-year hiatus before coming to Franklin Township in Sauk County, Wisconsin. These Cramers - Jeremiah, John, Solomon, and Adam – were the sons of Joseph Cramer, who was born in 1824 in Pennsylvania. In 1848, his son Solomon was sent to scout for new lands in the Wisconsin wilderness, and after the patriarch Joseph’s death in Ohio in 1850<sup>2</sup>, the other brothers trickled to Wisconsin.

When Plain was first settled, it was known as Cramer’s Corners because the Cramers owned more than 400 acres at the two main intersecting highways running north and south and east and west - present-day Hwy 23 and County B. For the first 30 years, these Cramers were mainly farmers carving out the wilderness to literally create farms, fields for crops, and meadows for their livestock.

1877 Plat map, Town of Franklin

Meaning of abbreviations on the map: S. Cramer [sec. 5-6] = Solomon Sr.; G. Cramer [sec. 7] = George [son of John]; A. Cramer [sec. 6] = Adam Cramer; J. Cramer [sec. 7-8] & [sec 8 sold to P. Luther in 1883] = John Cramer; J. Cramer [sec. 4] = Jeremiah Cramer; S. Cramer [sec., 13-14] = Solomon K. Cramer.

<sup>2</sup> There are various dates within this essay as to when the brothers came to Wisconsin because they came in different years and because sources (newspapers, obituaries, other historians) differ as to dates. My best estimate is that Solomon was first and came scouting land in 1848, took up a homestead in 1849 and brought his mother Catharine, brother Adam, and nephew Joseph in 1851. John and Jeremiah came in 1852.

Solomon Cramer, Sr.

One of the Cramer brothers stands out as more than a farmer. Solomon Cramer was the third son of Joseph Cramer and Catharine Killinger. He had been born in Pennsylvania in 1821, moved to Ohio with the family, and moved to Franklin Township, Wisconsin in 1848. He married Mary Ann Engel from Switzerland in 1865. They had eleven children – seven sons and four daughters. Solomon Cramer had the largest farm in the area (380 acres) to the north and west of the main intersection (see 1877 plat map on previous page). The farm was picturesque as shown in the photo below.

The beauty of the farm stems from the fact that Solomon was a carpenter by trade from his boyhood. As noted in his obituary:

Solomon Cramer, one of a family of six children – three boys and three girls – was born in Pennsylvania, March 3rd, 1821. Here, in his boyhood years, he chose carpentry as his vocation in life. Some years after, his parents and family moved to Ohio. While living there he pursued the same trade until, in the year, 1849, he came to Wisconsin, taking up a homestead... Weekly Home News, July 12, 1906.

Likely his carpentry and building work enabled him to accumulate the financial capital to buy so much land. He also had human capital in six sons - George, Solomon, Jr., Pearson, William, Jerry, and Ira – whom he trained not only in farming, but in carpentry and building more broadly. These human resources allowed the flexibility for Solomon to become a leader, entrepreneur, and developer who will shape Plain into the 1900s.

Attempt to build a local Protestant community

The Cramer brothers and most of the first settlers in the Plain area were of the Protestant faith. Church and school were important to them. The first school was set up in 1861, and T.J. Morgans from Wales was its teacher. Also, in 1861, Solomon Cramer set aside land for an M.E. Church in the hope of attracting a minister and building a church. The effort was unsuccessful as an M.E. Church was chartered in Spring Green that same year. So, the Franklin Township pioneers mainly relied on itinerant preachers for religious community. The circuit was comprised of White Mound, Honey Creek, Harrisburg, and Spring Green.<sup>3</sup> The meetings were held in schoolhouses until churches were built. It is possible that the lack of a social community around a Protestant church in Plain had effects on out-migration of these Protestant pioneers when Bavarian Catholics flooded the area in the 1870s. In contrast, the Catholic church and school in Plain became the community heart binding it together and remains so today.

The Protestant community's dead were buried in the Pleasant Hill cemetery (County B west of Plain) on Solomon Cramer's land. A Pleasant Hill Cemetery Association, comprised of Catholics and Protestants, was formed in 1858 to administer the cemetery although people had been buried there earlier.<sup>4</sup> Solomon did not officially donate land to the Association until 1869, but he must have given approval for burials. It is interesting to note that there was comity between the Catholics and Protestants of Plain early on. The church bell that tolled would have been that of the second Catholic church built in 1885 (Thering, p.156).

At the funeral (June 1887) of Mrs. Fred Schoenman (Margaret R. Born), young wife and mother (36y 11m 3d), the Catholic church bell tolled, as the long funeral procession of carriages passed, slowly, up the hill to the Pleasant View Cemetery (Thering, page 5).

Solomon as entrepreneur

Around 1870, Solomon, Sr. and his brother John Cramer sold the first lots for homes and commercial activity near the key intersection in Plain. The list below is gleaned from Thering's History of Plain and stories in the Weekly Home News. It is incomplete especially regarding homes. In addition, lots, homes, and businesses were resold over the years which masks the actual level of activity in the village.

1851	Joseph Cramer	lot sold to him by Sol Cramer
1866	John Cramer	first house in Plain; (later John Beck, Gust Hetzel)
1868	Bailey Wilcox	blacksmith shop on Cedar St. (later John Aron, Post Heiser)
1869	P.W. Perry	store
1874	John Ott	blacksmith
1875	Fr. Spitzelberger	St. Luke parsonage & 2-room school within
1876	Joseph Volk, Sr.	saloon and home (later Stautner saloon)

<sup>3</sup> See "Early History of the Spring Green Methodist Episcopal (M.E.) Church", which covers the period 1861-1880. We have a few markers of the Cramers' religious connections, which are mainly with that Church. In 1851, Nathaniel Mitchel, Esq united in marriage Solomon Cramer and Mary Ann Engel at her home. In 1891, Rev. D.M. Sinclair of the ME Church of Spring Green gave the eulogy for Solomon Cramer, Jr. at his home there. In 1875, Rev. J.H. Whitney of the M.E. Church in Reedsburg united Solomon Killinger Cramer with Samantha Rebecca Davis. In 1895, Rev. J.E. Webster of Spring Green gave the funeral service for Catharine Wells Cramer, the wife of Adam Cramer. In 1906, Rev. Prucia of Spring Green led the funeral service for Solomon Cramer, Sr. at the latter's home. In 1912, Rev. Neinstedt of the Black Hawk Evangelical Church united Oscar John Cramer and Caroline Barbara Schneller in marriage. See "The Cramer Family Tree" by Oscar John Cramer in The Other Cramers, pages 149-165.

<sup>4</sup> This recording appears to be a formality as the site was already being used as a cemetery as early as 1857. Cushing notes that three burials occurred in 1857 and a number in the 1860s. The first burial was a child, Mary M. Renard, died January 3, 1857 at 7 months, the child of R. and L. Renard. Solomon's own son, Joseph D. Cramer died October 7, 1857 at 1 year and 9 months. Most of the early burials were of children. The first adult burial was Barbara Weaver who died November 8, 1861 at 52 years of age. A cemetery association of early pioneers had been organized already in April 1858. Several Catholics were members of the association, including Sebastian Reuschlein, Jost Fulker (Voelkel), Paul Luther and George Neuheisel. More information about the cemetery and its occupants can be found in Myrtle E. Cushing, Cemetery Inscriptions of Sauk County, Wisconsin, Volume 6, page 35 and following.

Starting around 1880, Solomon, Sr. built multiple businesses one after the other. He had four sons at home who could help with the farm and the new enterprises, so he was able to seize opportunities. In 1880, Solomon built a rolling mill (grain mill) on the Honey Creek. In 1883, he built a sawmill on his land at the corner of Main and St. Luke Avenue. In 1883, he created a brickyard on land along the south side of the Honey Creek in a clay deposit (later Edward Kraemer and Sons and The Kraemer Company). The Weekly Home News reported that the Cramer brickyard was in full operation:

The making of brick at the Cramer Bros brickyard will be completed this week. One kiln containing 125,000 bricks is being burned and another of 90,000 will be ready this week. The total number burned by them this past week is 475,000 (26 April 1883).

We do not know where those bricks went or how much production there was over the years, but it is likely they went to building projects of Solomon Cramer, Jr.

Solomon Cramer, Jr. was 22 years old in 1880, a carpenter and already in the building business in Plain and the surrounding area. Later he moved the business to Spring Green but served a much broader area. Brothers Pearson and George S. Cramer along with relatives from Ohio were part of the crew. After Solomon, Jr. and George S. died in 1891, Pearson Cramer took over the business and broadened the crew outside the family.

In 1879, Alois Hutter built another store by Dresen Bros. at the corner of Main Street and Wachter Avenue with living quarters on the second floor and a dance hall on the third floor. Having sold his corner building to Mr. Wiemer for $1000 in June 1883, Alois Hutter purchased 40 acres including a house from John Cramer in August 1883 and had a store built by Cramer Bros. on Main Street. It took a train of twelve teams to haul the lumber from Spring Green to Plain for the store. (Thering, p. 60).

Plain in 1893

As mentioned above, Solomon and John Cramer had sold off land over the years<sup>5</sup> and, as a result, there was a small business community at the main intersection of Plain as shown on the 1893 plat map below. The businesses included two general stores, three saloons, a blacksmith shop, a butcher shop, and a cheesemaker. In addition, there was a public school, and the St. Luke church, school, and parsonage.

1893 plat map showing farms, homes, businesses, church, school, cemetery

Notes: The 1890s identification of the building for the blank box is unknown; it is the Frank & Van Haag house. The “Jos. Cramer” shown on the map was the only son of Adam Cramer; the property is at 1070 Main St next to the present-day post office. William Cramer later built a home at 1130 Cedar Street (later John C. and Joseph M. Ruhland, Harrold Schutz, Scott Ring) and Jerry at 1150 Cedar (later Lawrence Beck, Glen Jewell house). Other Cramers lived on farms: Adam had 80 acres; Sol, Sr. 314 acres; Sol., Jr. 120 acres; and Solomon K. 80 acres.

Solomon as land developer

Solomon had occasionally sold off small acreages and parcels of land, but around 1900, he became a developer in earnest. He had land near the village surveyed, laid out lots for business and residential use, and filed a map with Sauk County called “Cramers Platt.” This was the first

Solomon also continued his brick making and carpentry activities. Thering related:

About 1902, Cramer Bros. bought a new brick making machine with a large boiler which weighed over four tons. According to Anton Brickl, an employee, the machine had to be brought to Plain over the big Hollow Road, as it was too heavy to bring over the Hennamon Hill, with road as rough as it was in those days.

Solomon must have known there would be a spurt of building activity to have made this investment. He would know, for example, that his three sons planned to start the Cramer Brothers store:

<sup>6</sup> Note the difference in what Geo. Schwartz sold the property and what he paid for it on the same day (above). A nice $2005 profit.

In the summer of 1902, with the completion of a kiln of 80,000 bricks from the Cramer Brickyard, the Cramer Brothers – Ira, Jerry, William, and Pearson – began the foundation of their new two-story brick building on the corner of Main Street and Alma Avenue (Thering, page 79).

He also would have heard about plans for a new Gothic-style Catholic church in Plain:

Some of the bricks came from the brickyard of Cramer Bros. at the price of $7.00 per thousand. Ninety thousand bricks were brought out from Menomonie, Wisconsin. The cut stones were given by Joseph Blau to the parish from his stone quarry (Thering, p. 159).

About 1905,

John G. Diehl erected a new cheese factory [Cedar Grove Cheese Factory], due east from the former location, on the Gassner farm. Brick used was made in the Cramer brickyard (Thering, p. 48).

It is likely that many of the brick houses in Plain, Bear Creek, and Spring Green were supplied with brick from Cramers' brickyard.

Solomon Cramer dies

On January 26 at 5:30 pm in the afternoon, Solomon Sr. suffered a heart attack and died. He had been on his way to his daily visit to the Cramer Brothers store. He died from drowning when he had the attack and fell into a ravine. The size of his funeral showed that he was held in great esteem. The Weekly Home News recounted:

Friends and relatives, innumerable from all vicinities shared their sympathy with his bereaved, by witnessing the funeral ceremony which took place at the home of the deceased Saturday, June 29th. Rev. Prucia of Spring Green officiating and Misses Lilian and Mary Evans, Laura Sprecher, Rev. Prucia and Frank Simpson singing songs appropriate to the occasion. After the ceremony more than one hundred teams followed the remained mortal of Solomon Cramer to Pleasant Hill cemetery, where he was laid in rest. Source: Weekly Home News, July 12, 1906.

His grave marker is the largest in the Pleasant Hill cemetery (see photo below). There are more Cramers buried there than any other family name.

The beginning of the end of the Cramer Era in Plain

Solomon did not have a succession plan, so his estate went to Probate Court. Rather than keep all the enterprises together, the Cramer brothers decided to sell them at auction in 1908. The farm was sold to Anton Riek, the sawmill and feed mill to “sawyer Joe” (Joseph C.) Ruhland, and the brickyard to the auctioneer J. C. Wells.

There were only four of Solomon’s sons left for the inheritance.<sup>7</sup> Ira Cramer took his share and headed to South Dakota where he died two years later. William and Jerry continued to run the Cramer Brothers store, and Pearson continued to run the carpenter business. In 1918, they sold Cramer Brothers store to Phillip Bettinger. William built a house (1150 Cedar St.) in Plain and worked in the dray business hauling material for the new St. Luke School. In 1920, he sold his house to Joseph C. Ruhland and moved to Baraboo where he died in 1943 and was buried in the Catholic section of the Walnut Hill cemetery. Jerry built a house (1160 Cedar St.) in Plain in 1908, worked as a machinist in the Ruhland sawmill and, in 1922, sold the house to Lawrence Beck and moved to Baraboo. Later he moved to Ft. Atkinson where he died in 1957 and was buried in the Lakeview Catholic Cemetery. Around 1910, Pearson moved from Spring Green<sup>8</sup> to Plain and built a house at 1110 Cedar St.; in 1921, he moved to Wausau near his stepson where he died in 1932 and is buried in St. Joseph Cemetery there. These were three of the four Cramers who turned Catholic because of marriage.

The last Cramer to leave Plain was Joseph Cramer - a nephew of Solomon Cramer. Joseph, the son of Adam Cramer, went to work for Solomon as a farm laborer at the age of 17 and stayed until the farm was sold. We do not know what he did afterwards, but his home is now the home of Luena Repka Ruhland Meister. Joseph moved to Spring Green in 1924 where he died in 1926 and was buried in Pleasant Hill. His wife Josephine Thering is buried in the Old St. Luke Cemetery. It was about 75 years between when the first Cramer entered in the Plain area and when the last Cramer left. Most of the Cramers had moved elsewhere in Sauk County, e.g., Reedsburg, Sauk-Prairie, Baraboo, Lodi.

The Cramer legacy in Plain today

There is little physical evidence that the Cramers were ever in Plain. The two largest buildings, the farm complex and Cramer Brothers Store, are gone as is any physical evidence of the brickyard, the sawmill, or grist mill. Evidence that remains is Pleasant Hill Cemetery, Rings tavern, three former Cramer houses on Cedar Street, Luena Meister's house on Main Street, three brick houses on Clover Street, and unidentified brick houses in the countryside. There is no social or cultural legacy. There are no Cramers living in Plain today. There is not even a photo of Solomon Cramer, Sr., other than the blurred image in the 1903 family photo in front of Cramer Brother's store (page 8). Hopefully, this essay and the larger book on which it is based will demonstrate that their contribution to the Town of Franklin and the Village of Plain is important and to be remembered. We request that any Cramer family members reading this will share photos with the Old Franklin Township Historical Society.

The December newsletter brings you a most interesting feature article written by Ken Kraemer with a complementary story of the octagon barn by Marian Ruhland Burmester, OFTHS newsletter editor. You will certainly enjoy reading about the early pioneers in our community and the "rest of the Cramer history" and their importance to the Township of Franklin and the community of Plain.

We are waiting to hear from the Wisconsin Historical Society regarding our application for St. Anne's Shrine to be designated in the State Register of Historic Places. The timetable for reviewing applications has been delayed because of the current pandemic. We are all impacted by delays in our daily lives and have an opportunity to address the Covid 19 health issue by getting vaccinated.

OFTHS continues to digitize our collection of photos, genealogies, and documents under the leadership of Gary Haas. This process does take time, and OFTHS asks everyone for their patience to complete this major undertaking. With grants from the Wisconsin Historical Society and the Wisconsin Council for Local History, along with funding by Kraemer Brothers, OFTHS is updating their computer system to meet the needs of accessing the digitized files in order to facilitate requests from our OFTHS members.

A major focus at the museum during 2021 were exhibits of veterans from our community who were involved in WWI, WWII, and the Korean War. These outstanding exhibits were assembled by Mary Jayne Liegel. I hope many of you had the opportunity to visit and view these historical displays.

Please contact us to make arrangements to see our collection by emailing us at plainofths@gmail.com or by calling Eugene Hausner 608-588-7780 or Mary Jayne Liegel 608-546-4562.

We have enjoyed your visits to the OFTHS this summer and especially during Plain's Strassenfest in October. Wishing you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

Until next time.....Eugene Hausner

Octagon barn north of Plain

This unique and interesting octagon barn is located north of Plain at S9692 County Road N and is presently owned by Timothy and Cyndi Thering. Hildegard Thering wrote about the farm in A History of Plain, Wisconsin, page 4: "T. J. Morgans of South Wales was the second settler. . . After marrying Martha Ann Slauter in 1848, he settled in 1849 on the lower part of Sugar Grove, later known as the Trumpf farm." Page 40: "In November 1900, about forty men gathered at the farm of Mrs. George Trumpf for the purpose of raising her new barn, presently the farm home of Mrs. Clem Thering. Being an octagonal barn, it was considered one of the best in this locality. The measurements show an uncanny understanding of the principles of geometry and stress. One side of the octagon is 28 feet long, 68 feet from side to side, and the height is 66 feet. The barn was finished by the Cramer crew, consisting of Pearson Cramer, D. W. Morgans, Ed Hood, George Nachreiner, and Mike Schwartz. . . The Trumpf farm was one of the first farms settled in the Town of Franklin. Clem Thering purchased the farm from Herman Alt in December 1952. Herman's father, John B. Alt, bought the farm, consisting of 304 acres, from Dick Hemberger in the fall of 1919. John Weiss purchased the farm from Mrs. Trumpf in November 1907. In February 1908, Clemens and Henry Ring rented the farm for one year, when it was sold to Dick Hemberger by John Weiss in 1909."

The following owners were found in the Grantor/Grantee Listing for Sauk County, Wisconsin:

July 2, 1910, John B. Weiss sold to Fred Hemberger - Vol. 96, page 73, Warranty Deed # 1523776.
December 16, 1919, Ferdinand Hemberger sold to John B. Alt - Vol. 120, page 101, Warranty Deed # 185377.
